

NEW MAYOR SIMPLE IN HIS HOME LIFE AND LOVES HIS DOG

Little Suburb Home of Daughter
Where He Is Stopping,
Now Guarded by Police.

WIFE FAVORS DIGNITY.

New "First Lady of New York" for the Old-Fashioned Women.

The new Mayor of New York is a democratic man—despite the fact that he is a Republican—and he likes simplicity and clearly loves to get away from the bustle of city life. When he went to the pretty, little, unpretentious home on the outskirts of Jamaica last spring, Arthur L. Kline refused to allow his married daughter, Mrs. Edward Schell, to have a telephone put in the house, and until last Tuesday no phone was there.

All the people in the Hill Crest section know Mayor Kline, but they haven't learned to call him Mayor yet. The home of his daughter, his only child, and his son-in-law, is more than a mile from the station, but it has been his regular habit every day to walk the distance on returning from the city in the evening, and he always speaks to every person he met.

Mayor Kline's sudden accession to the office already has caused more than one connection in Hill Crest, and last night the largest event of all happened. A policeman came out and stationed himself in front of the Schell door and remained there until another policeman relieved him this morning. Policemen are on duty in Hill Crest, and one is seen there rarely more than once or twice a year. Now, perhaps, one will be there both day and night, for it is a station of New York to guard the Mayor.

THE BIG BULLDOG AN IMPORTANT MEMBER OF FAMILY.

The Schell cottage has no number, for the section is not thickly settled, and the little house has only been occupied since the Kline-Schell wedding took place last October, and its only inhabitants are Mayor and Mrs. Kline, the Schells and "Bully." "Bully" is an important member. He is a big, white bulldog, and his chief occupation is waiting on the doorstep for the Mayor's return in the evening, when he dashes off the steps to meet him. "Bully" and the Mayor are particular about the dog never can decide whether he most prefers romping with the new Mayor or watching Mrs. Kline as she couples herself with household affairs. He is decidedly fond of both, and some little share of his affection goes to the other two dwellers in the house.

Both the new Mayor and his wife are old fashioned in many ways, and Mrs. Kline struck the key-note of their standards when she gave her first interview following the news of Mayor Gaynor's death.

"I know, of course, that the public has the desire and right to know about us," she said after expressing her sorrow over the death of one who was a friend as well as an associate, indicating that hereafter she will be a true "first lady of the city." Mrs. Kline is of Irish parentage, and her modesty proves most attractive to one who talks with the gray-haired little woman.

FEELS NEED FOR DIGNITY OF WOMEN.

"Let me say that I feel, above everything, the need for a strengthening of the old modest dignity of women. They do not have to be old-fashioned, but let them return to the beauty and charm of modesty."

"I am sorry that so many of the women of to-day scoff at this sacred virtue. As for myself, the civil influence I shall wield will be wielded right at the home."

"I have always tried to attend to my home affairs and to make my family feel that home was the best place of all, and I feel sure that my husband will never be so exalted in position that our home will not be to him the place he loves most."

"I believe women should take an interest in their husbands' affairs, but I do not think they should argue about them. Anything that my husband may do is right, I know, and all women should believe that of theirs."

"I read the daily papers and keep up with what my husband does and the politics of the city so that I may discuss them with him, and I try to keep up with everything he is interested in. I can entertain him in the evening by knowing something about that which most concerns him outside our home."

NEW "FIRST LADY" SAYS SUFFRAGE IS ONLY A FAD.

Then Mrs. Kline branched off on affairs of the day and condemned suffrage, calling it a "passing fad." She said that she thought the modern dress of women was vulgar and shocking, but believed that reforms would soon come.

She takes the news of her husband's sudden rise to world-wide fame promissively and calmly and her chief feeling seems to be that of grief because of the death of the late Mayor.

"I intended dining with us before he called, but he told us that he would prefer waiting until he returned so that he might enjoy his visit as much as he would like to," she said of Mayor Gaynor.

Mrs. Kline was the daughter of a prominent contractor who came to Brooklyn from Ireland. As Miss Frances Phelan she was very popular before her marriage in 1886.

RELIGIOUS BATTLE OF PARENTS STOPS FUNERAL OF BABE

Father, a Jew, Insists on Jewish Rites, to Which Christian Mother Objects.

A crowd of several hundred persons stood around the home of Allen Krickman, No. 75 Springfield avenue, Irvington, N. J., to-day. Policemen of Irvington and of Newark, in which city half of the Krickman home and most of the back yard stand, were on hand to keep the crowd in order.

Within the house lay the body of William Krickman, the seven-month-old son of Krickman, a Jewish dry-goods merchant, and his wife of four years, a Christian, who was Miss Mary Walker. Krickman declares that his son shall be buried by the Jewish ritual in the Jewish cemetery in East Orange. Mrs. Krickman is equally insistent that the baby shall be buried in the Clinton cemetery in Irvington, and the bitterness which difference in religion has caused has involved half the town.

Krickman says that on his marriage his wife signed an agreement that any child should be reared in the Jewish faith and buried according to the Jewish law. Mrs. Krickman declares hysterically that she never made such an agreement.

The little chap died yesterday in the Baber Hospital in Newark, and where a few moments before both parents had knelt together at the child's bedside, now rose to wrangle with each other over the disposal of the small remains. Krickman rushed to a Jewish undertaker and ordered him to care for the body. Mrs. Krickman employed an undertaker of her own, and as he reached the hospital first she got possession of the body of her little son.

All arrangements had been made for the funeral yesterday, but Mrs. Krickman found when she sought a burial permit in Newark that one had been granted to her husband and the Irvington authorities refused to issue another.

Krickman, frantic at the prospect of an unorthodox burial for his son, and not certain that his wife had not got a burial permit also, rushed to the house with a crowd of friends. Chief of Police Green of Irvington sent several men to the house, but even under their protection Mrs. Krickman feared to leave the place.

Krickman and his friends kept guard all night and this morning, determined to get possession of his son, Krickman demanded admittance to the house. Mrs. Krickman refused to let him in and the father seized an axe and tried to chop down the door. The front door, which Krickman attacked, is in Irvington. So, while the Newark police stood by, the Irvington men grabbed Krickman and locked him up. He was bailed out at once.

The Health Departments of Newark and Irvington were notified of the situation, but they declined to take any action at present, though they announced that they would hold Krickman responsible for the proper burial of the baby. Since Mrs. Krickman cannot get a permit for the funeral this means that eventually her husband will have his way.

According to Mrs. Krickman, there was no trouble over the baby's burial until her father-in-law, John Krickman, insisted that his son bury the baby under the Jewish ritual. Until then, said Mrs. Krickman, Krickman had made no objection to her plans for the funeral.

Jamaica, a section of newlyweds. Her dark hair, worn close about the temples, affords a pleasant contrast to her eyes of blue. She attended a convent in Brooklyn, as did her mother, and was married to Edward Schell of No. 875 Fifth street, Brooklyn, on the 30th of last October. The ceremony was attended by the late Mayor.

Mrs. Schell is very proud of her father and believes he will be as good a Mayor as he has been a father. She is not very startled over her sudden prominence, and she is extremely anxious that "Bully" shall not be taken to City Hall when Mayor Kline moves back to his Brooklyn home at No. 284 Carlton avenue.

SAID HE'D MARRY HIS OWN DAUGHTER, MRS. MARTIN SAYS

Multi-Millionaire Also Declared
In Affidavits to Have Boasted of "Small Harem."

In an attempt to collect alimony from her husband, Samuel G. Martin, a multi-millionaire mining promoter, with offices at No. 1270 Broadway and scores of mining claims in Colorado, Mrs. Mabel Elsie Martin to-day filed sensational affidavits with Justice Delaney in the Supreme Court.

Among charges which she and business associates of her husband make are:

That he told Mrs. Martin he was going to wed his own daughter by a previous marriage.

That he hired detectives to lure her into a trap and furnished them money to buy witnesses.

That he provided clothes for two women and told associates that he couldn't get along without a small harem.

That he threatened to send Mrs. Martin to an insane asylum as he told her he had done with the former Mrs. Martin.

That he took other women to luncheons, bought expensive gowns for them and ordered every one out of his offices when the women came to visit him.

That he compelled his wife to sleep in the Subway and in Central Park and when she complained, he told her she had "lept too often on the prairies in South Dakota to be afraid."

Mrs. Martin is the daughter of Circuit Judge Cullison of Council Bluffs, Ia. She is attending a business college, and in the seat beside her, the wife alleges, sits Lawrence Martin, her husband's son, who is at school to spy on her. Last month she brought suit for a separation, and her attorney, Michael Martin Dolphin, has been in court every week pressing the claim for alimony. The affidavits containing the serious charges were not revealed until to-day.

"EVERY WOMAN AND MAN A CROOK," HE IS QUOTED.

Mrs. Martin declares that her husband labored under the hallucination that members of his family are degenerates. "Every woman is bad and every man a crook until they prove they are not," is one of the pessimistic utterances attributed to Martin in the affidavit.

She says that he told her that he wanted to marry Frances Martin, whom Mrs. Martin claims is his daughter by a former marriage, as she (Mrs. Martin) was getting too old.

After reciting that she had been constantly shadowed by detectives she says she met two of them in front of her home, No. 33 West Twenty-ninth street, and they admitted they were following her and apologized and complimented her.

Experiences with private detectives, who offered to buy testimony from her if it was favorable to Martin and reflected upon the wife, is one of the statements made by Mrs. Jesse Muir, who owns an apartment house in Brooklyn where Mrs. Martin lived. "Are you trying to make me?" Mrs.

EDWARD SCHELL

Muir replied, according to the affidavit, adding that the detective could go back to Martin and tell him "this was one Scotch woman he could not buy."

At another time, still according to the affidavit, a detective who gave the name of Charles Bill, called at the Muir home and said he was in the employ of Martin and was sent to get Mrs. Martin drunk, if he could, take her to dinner and then to a hotel, so that her husband could get evidence against her for use in a divorce case. The detective told her he would receive $1,000 from Martin for success.

Egon Von Novelly, who was associated in business with Martin, declares in an affidavit that Martin spent from $15 to $25 a day on Frances Martin and her chum, Mrs. Emma Roach. The latter, Mrs. Roach called every day at Mr. Martin's office, the affidavit sets forth, "and he took her to lunch. She was getting a divorce from her husband and Mr. Martin was assisting her. On one occasion Martin told me that a harem called on him, one in Connecticut called him on the long distance phone."

Von Novelly avers that Martin's income was $2,000,000 within three years. J. H. Vandenberg, a bond holder in the Martin Company, tells of going to lunch with Martin and Mrs. Roach and that during the meal Martin suggested that Mrs. Roach take a trip with him to Bermuda.

FIND GIRL'S DEATH DUE TO CRIMINAL OPERATION

Coroner Defers Arrest in Martha
Washington Hotel
Case.

After a lengthy inquiry to-day into the death at the Hotel Martha Washington on Tuesday of Miss Margaret Bissett, Coroner Winterbottom announced that Dr. McCallister, the autopsy surgeon, had found that death had been caused by a criminal operation but that until further investigations had been completed no arrests would be ordered. The coroner gave to a detective for investigation a batch of letters and telegrams addressed to the dead girl by a man, which were found in her baggage at the hotel.

Dr. Arthur J. Schindlerbach of No. 51 East Seventy-eighth street and Miss M. Rutherford, a trained nurse from Hills registry on West One Hundred and Thirty-sixth street, who had treated and attended Miss Bissett prior to her death, each underwent a lengthy examination. Both denied that they had seen the dead girl before her final illness.

POSSE CAPTURES NEGRO WHO ATTACKED CHILD; POLICE FEAR RIOTS

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 12.—Teresa Akins, a ten-year-old white girl, was this afternoon attacked by a negro in this city limits. A posse of citizens quickly formed on learning of the assault. They captured the negro, Charles Hank, and he is being held under heavy guard of police.

Authorities tried to suppress the facts because of the fatal riots in 1908, which grew out of a similar assault.

TWO KILLED IN AUTO SMASH.

CATMEL, Ind., Sept. 12.—William Walz and his wife of Noblesville, Ind., were instantly killed and their companions, Mr. and Mrs. Loris Naworth of Noblesville, fatally injured to-day when an interurban electric car crashed into their auto at a crossing two miles north of Carmel.

SULZER BROUGHT NAME OF HIS WIFE INTO STOCK DEAL

Signed an Order in Her Name Authorizing Transfer of the Shares.

TALK OF GERRY CHECK.

Impeachment Managers Want to Know Whether the Commodore Gave $5,000.

Documentary proof of William Sulzer's stock transactions was produced this afternoon at the first public meeting of the Board of Assembly managers for the impeachment of William Sulzer. Melville B. Fuller, head of the banking and brokerage firm of Harris & Fuller, identified an order signed by William Sulzer, "Mr. Sulzer" directing the firm to hand over the securities held by the firm in Sulzer's name to Louis, Commander Commander L. M. Josephthal.

This is the first time that Mrs. Sulzer's name has come out officially in the stock transactions. Josephthal got the securities in question when he paid the indebtedness of the Governor amounting to $275,000. Mr. Fuller said that the signature was Mr. Sulzer's and then declared that his firm never had an account with Mrs. Sulzer, wife of the impeached Governor.

Walter Halliday, secretary to Robert L. Gerry, on being recalled to the witness stand this afternoon, said that during the recess he had got in telephone communication with Mr. Gerry at Delaware Lake, and that Mr. Gerry sent word that he would come back to town and testify before the Board of Managers any time after Monday.

Aside from the effort to find out whether Commodore Elbridge T. Gerry sent cable orders for a $5,000 contribution to the Sulzer campaign fund, the managers heard the testimony of Daniel Brady, brother of "Diamond Jim."

When Daniel Brady was called to the stand by Mr. Kresel, he admitted sending a check for $100 to the Sulzer campaign fund.

Q. Do you know that your check ever got to Mr. Sulzer? A. Oh, yes, because it came back.

Q. When was it destroyed? A. After the impeachment of the Governor several weeks ago. The stub was destroyed also.

"My mother had four boys and taught them to keep away from politics and whiskey," was Mr. Brady's parting shot as he was excused.

DR. BRODER CAN'T REMEMBER ABOUT HIS CHECKS.

Dr. Julius Broder of No. 100 East Sixteenth street had been instructed to produce checks and stubs drawn in October, 1912. But the physician said he did not recall the checks or stubs with him. He declared he was not a business man and did not make out stubs, as he depended solely on the bank statements.

Q. Have you the cancelled vouchers returned by the bank? A. No, I destroy them after a few weeks.

Q. When did you draw a check for $1,000 in October, 1912? A. No, I don't remember. I never got more than $200 in the bank.

The physician admitted he had drawn several checks of $100 or so for the Tammany Club in the Tenth Assembly District.

Q. You expected to be appointed State Superintendent of Health? A. I did.

Q. Did Mr. Sulzer promise you the place? A. No, he never promised. He said he would see what could be done when it came to him.

TRYING TO LOCATE WHERE ABOUTS OF ROBERT L. GERRY.

William Halliday, secretary to Robert L. Gerry, was the next witness. He testified that Adjt. Gen. Hamilton, prior to his appointment by Sulzer, had occupied a confidential position in the office of Elbridge T. Gerry at No. 55 Broadway. "Mr. Hamilton did not show any inclination to tell the whereabouts of Robert L. Gerry," Mr. Gerry left town yesterday before process servers arrived at his office.

The Assembly managers failed to get any information from the witness as to whether Robert L. Gerry had given Sulzer a check for the campaign.

Mr. Arthur J. Schindlerbach of No. 51 East Seventy-eighth street and Miss M. Rutherford, a trained nurse from Hills registry on West One Hundred and Thirty-sixth street, who had treated and attended Miss Bissett prior to her death, each underwent a lengthy examination. Both denied that they had seen the dead girl before her final illness.

DETAILS OF THE SULZER DEALS RETOLD ON STAND.

Mr. Kresel summed up for the witness that the firm on July 10, 1910, was carrying 400 "C. C. C." 300 American Smelter and 100 Southern Pacific stock.

Mr. Fuller said his firm had paid a protest fee of $144 on a note not made until a few days before the note was cashed. The note was not cashed at the Gallatin National Bank, where the brokers had an account.

"At the end of February, 1912," asked the lawyer, "did not Mr. Sulzer owe your firm $10,337.87 for which you held 99 C. C. C., 300 American Smelters and 100 Southern Pacific?"

"That appears correct," said the witness. "On Nov. 18, 1912, Mr. Sulzer came into my office and personally handed me ten $1,000 bills or $10,000."

Q. Was election day in 1912 on Nov. 5? A. Yes.

This $10,000 item had not been brought out before, according to Chairman Levy, but Mr. Fuller insisted that he talked to Eugene Lamb Richards, counsel for the Kresel Committee, about the matter. Counsel brought out that on December 16, 1912, Mr. Sulzer paid the brokers $5,000 in cash.

SAYS MONEY WILL BE CONNECTED WITH CAMPAIGN FUND.

Chairman Levy said that this board would show that the $10,000 and $500 paid to the brokers were campaign contributions.

"The day after Mr. Sulzer gave you $500 on Dec. 16, did you give him 100 shares of C. C. C.?" asked Kresel.

"Yes," said Witness Fuller.

Q. Did you still have 200 C. C. C., 300 Smelters and 100 Southern Pacific? A. Yes.

Q. Is it true that on Dec. 20, 1912, Mr. Sulzer owed your firm $40,338.84 against which you held that stock? A. Yes.

Q. Did you on June 14, 1913, receive any money on this account? A. Yes, we got one per cent. dividend on Smelters from the company and a check for $5,000 from A. M. Spriggs, a former Governor of Montana.

Q. On July 18, 1913, Mr. Sulzer owed you $217,000 which was paid by L. M. Josephthal? A. Yes.

Q. Have you an order written by Mr. Sulzer authorizing you to hand over the securities to Mr. Josephthal? A. Yes, we have.

Q. Did you contribute to the Sulzer campaign fund? A. Yes.

"ILLUMINATING GAS" GIVEN AS CAUSE OF RICH WOMAN'S DEATH

Blank Spaces in Certificate and Conflicting Newspaper Notice Not Explained.

(Special to The Evening World.)
PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12.—The death of Mrs. Sarah D. King, wife of Clarence P. King, banker, of Philadelphia and Washington, which occurred in Atlantic City on Tuesday, was reported this afternoon to have been caused by "illuminating gas," and not from heart disease, as first given out. Mrs. King was buried yesterday in Laurel Hill Cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. King had a seashore residence at States and Pacific avenues. Friends say Mrs. King had been an invalid for several years and a member of the family who after the woman's demise had a death notice inserted in an Atlantic City newspaper gave instructions to publish it just as it was written, which stated that Mrs. King died from heart trouble. The death certificate was not filed with the Bureau of Vital Statistics until the office was about to close last night.

Registrar A. L. Glenn of Atlantic City permitted the certificate to be seen today and the cause of death was written in as "illuminating gas." Blank spaces on either side of the line were not filled in, and the registrar said he was unable to learn therefore whether Mrs. King was accidentally asphyxiated or not. The certificate was filed by County Physician Torrington, according to Registrar Glenn.

The name of the victim, known to the detectives at Manhattan and Washington Headquarters, has been suppressed until definite action against the midwife is taken. This much was said that she has three sisters living in New York and that they have given the detectives of Inspector Purro's staff information upon which the recent activities have been based.

As much of the story as can be printed at the present time carries the young immigrant to the home near North Bergen. There she took service immediately after her arrival from Ireland without having seen all of her kin in this country, who are scattered through the greater city. The man responsible for the condition in which she soon found herself remained in Ireland.

Less than a month ago it became apparent to the girl's employers that she was approaching motherhood. They wrote to one of her sisters in New York, telling her of the girl's physical condition and saying they could no longer have her continue in her service. The girl seemed overwhelmed with mortification and made cautious inquiries of her mistress to determine if there was any way she could escape the inevitable.

WOMAN IN JERSEY IS BEING WATCHED IN RIVER MYSTERY

Had Male Accomplices, It Is Believed—Death Followed Criminal Operation.

EXPECT ARREST SOON.

Police Believe They Have Secured Real Identification
Now of Dead Girl.

Detectives in New York and neighboring New Jersey towns who have been trying to solve the mystery of the Hudson River murder have progressed so far in running down what appears to be the first real solution that The Evening World is in a position to set forth most of the closely guarded details of what Inspector Furro at Headquarters believes to be the true story of the murder. Upon this lead Headquarters men and the detectives of Hudson and Bergen Counties across the river have been co-operating to-day with feverish energy.

Here are the salient points in the new hypothesis hinted at in a late edition of The Evening World yesterday, whose revelation cannot at this time defeat the ends of justice, as close is the police net woven about the person or persons suspected of complicity in the murder.

POLICE SURE THEY KNOW VICTIM OF THE CRIME.

The victim of the crime was an Irish girl, less than six months in this country, who had been employed as a servant in the home of a family living in the vicinity of the town of North Bergen.

The murder is believed to have been done by a midwife, who has enjoyed a shady reputation with the police of Bergen County and whose establishment has been called "the slaughter house" because of the prevalent and permanent suspicion that several women have been the victims of malpractice there. This place has been under surveillance of the Bergen detectives for two days and they are simply awaiting the clearing up of a few mooted points in Manhattan before making an arrest.

The girl about whose death the present mystery centers went to this midwife to undergo a criminal operation only two months before she expected to become a mother. She died under the ministrations of the midwife and by the midwife's assistant, it is almost positively established, by one or more male accomplices—her body was dismembered and distributed in the Hudson River.

NAME SUPPRESSED UNTIL ARREST IS MADE.

The name of the victim, known to the detectives at Manhattan and Washington Headquarters, has been suppressed until definite action against the midwife is taken. This much was said that she has three sisters living in New York and that they have given the detectives of Inspector Purro's staff information upon which the recent activities have been based.
